

Environmental Protection Announces 2022 New Product of the Year Winners

DALLAS, October 19, 2022 – Environmental Protection has announced the winning companies in its 2022 New Product of the Year contest. The contest attracted a wide variety of products and services, with many utilizing new technologies in products aimed at protecting the environment. Software/SaaS was a popular category this year, with Dakota Software and Envirosite Corporation tying for the top submissions.

“Companies and organizations are becoming more aware of the deepening environmental issues across the globe with each year that passes. Environmental Protection’s annual New Product of the Year contest shines a light on the emerging list of excellent products and services built to ensure a higher level of compliance with federal standards and regulations,” Environmental Protection Editor Sydney Shepard said. “The organizations behind these new technologies and equipment are service-minded and solution-driven, the mindset needed to combat the evolution of our environment.”

Entries were judged in nine different categories including: Overall Value, Ease of Use, Innovation, Special Features and Quality. Judges scored products one through five in each category, and the entrant with the highest overall score was awarded in that category.
